Learn The Rules Of French Pronunciation I am shocked to see the number of students who never learned the rules of French pronunciation. Or the difference between "u" and "ou", "é" and "è". Of course, more than ever, audio is a must! Learn Both Traditional And Modern Spoken French Now, there are the rules, and then there is the reality. I call this "modern French": French like you'll hear it used daily in the streets of France. False French Beginner - French Level A2 You've studied French before (maybe in school), but you forgot most of it. The À Moi Paris method progresses differently than the traditional methods, in particular in regard to tenses and moods. Even if used in the right context, it may surprise you. Imagine your reaction if a beginner said: "I gonna" in English. In any case, the point of these Word versions is that they are 100% editable and are not intended to be final versions, but rather the basis of YOUR final version. However, if a foreigner wanted to understand English people when they speak, s/he would need to understand "I gonna" since it's used frequently. You need to learn the "real" modern spoken French language: not slang, not "hood" French, but the way everybody speaks in a relaxed, casual environment. Most of the time I have used Arial and other common fonts, but sometimes you may have to locate and download a font, if you want the layout to look the same. The tenses of the past are a real mess in French. Or "il y a" is pronounced "ya". If you don't know that, you can't invent it. All the files have been checked and tidied up where necessary. Why do you pronounce the verb in "ils écoutent" as "zécout" (with a strong liaison in Z) but the verb of "les enfants écoutent" as "écool" (no liaison)? As usual, the files are presented "as is". Drill on the present tense only, drill on "être" and "avoir", adjective agreement, questions, pronunciation... It may not be extremely intellectually stimulating, but it's what you need to master at this stage of your French studies. My downloadable audiobook À Moi Paris Method - Beginner features a fun French story written with the beginner French student in mind. In order to remember things, the way you organize your newly acquired French data is as important as the data itself. Maybe you remember the logic of beginner's French grammar but you need to refresh it all, set fast reflexes when speaking and gain confidence to use your French in conversations. The French learning method you use should explain how to form these sounds: how to place your mouth, your tongue, your lips... French pronunciation will become much clearer when it's explained to you the right way. So, take it for what it is: a fun challenge, a positive attitude, and a way to communicate the bare essentials should no one speak English at all. See our disclaimer for more details. The French would kind of expect you to speak French the "traditional" way: a lot of glidings may sound a bit weird in the mouth of a beginner. However, you may want to read them all since they will all help you to learn French efficiently. What is a Beginner Student? I believe these versions are almost 100% faithful to the original PDF files, but you may notice some changes - particularly if you don't have the fonts used installed on your computer. Also available: Find resources for Headway 5th edition at headwayonline.com. Here are my tips to best learn French as a self-learning beginner student of French, learning French for his/her own benefit, not just to pass written tests. You will find more about it on Wikipedia. And that's great! At least, you don't have any bad habits and you cannot wait to start your French language journey! You need help on every possible front: French pronunciation and vocabulary, but also very accessible explanations to clarify the differences between the French and English languages. Adjectives? If you see you are already a solid A2 French level, then you may want to look at my advice for intermediate speakers of French. Then you may be interested in saying "my dog likes to play with his red ball": "mon chien aime jouer avec sa balle rouge"... Try making up simple sentences you could actually use in real life. Actually, I would not encourage you to speak this way as a beginner. It's very pretty there!) smile and point to the view... The method you use should reflect this. Use the access card in the back of your Student's Book to log in or >>buy an access code. Pronouns? So, studying the present tense is what will give you the best return for the time you invest. We do them without thinking about it, no matter our age, or our level of education: it's very natural to apply some glidings when you speak French casually nowadays. If you don't believe this offer is genuine, please write to me (the author, Matt Purland) and I will send you a personal reply to say that you may use this work. Total French Beginners Should Always Start With Politeness Even for the most basic interactions in French, you will need to master the precise vocabulary and modern pronunciation of French politeness expressions. Are you really learning French when you are jumping from one YouTube video to the next? Select your level to browse interactive exercises and downloadable audio and video resources. Simplify Your Sentences Yes, it will be nice to be able to say one day in a restaurant: "I would be delighted if you could kindly seat us by the window, so we may enjoy the spectacular view". But it's also very easy to lose track of your goal and end up losing your time. Right now, every interaction you have involving the French language is a success! How to Learn French as a Beginner (A1 A2 Levels) I will start with the most important French learning tip I can give: Modern spoken French and traditional written French are VERY different: if you only learn French from a written source, it's unlikely you will understand the French when they speak to you, and it's unlikely they'll understand you! Now, let's see how someone who is just starting to learn French should proceed. Read my article to see which French Today's audiobook level approximately corresponds to which CEFR level. Don't get lost in the intellectual challenge. On top of politeness, learn useful French sentences and their correct pronunciation, focus on the "je" form of the verb and asking information questions: Ça coûte combien ? If not, then you may of course ignore this offer. On other occasions there may be minuscule variations in such elements as headers and footers, page order, or page numbers. Good luck with your French studies! Beware Of The Intellectual In You Lots of students actually enjoy the learning challenge. You don't need to retain publisher/author information and your version will not be Public Domain (unless you choose this), since it will be a new work. French Today's approach is unique. If you want the French to understand you when you speak, you don't necessarily need to apply these glidings. Published on Oct 14, 2020!NT Catalogue ELT 2021 Cambridge University Press As a French beginner, your goals should be: to be confident enough so that you are not afraid to exchange a few words with a French person, get a grip of French pronunciation so you can understand the French when they speak to you, and be understood by them, handle basic conversations in specific situations. Notice quick results and feel good about yourself. For example, the "ne" part of the negation is often silent. Or are you just having fun? True French Beginner - French Level A1 You are a blank canvas. A lot of schools follow the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR). It is an international standard for describing language ability. The spoken French taught in American classrooms is a fiction, based on ideas about how people should speak, not on how they do speak! Waugh & Fonsoca-Greber - University of Arizona That's why. Apply all these tips and you'll be on your way to becoming a French intermediate speaker in no time. Try placing that in an English conversation... So, to improve your French as a beginner, you should focus on learning things you would actually use. Organising Your French Studies As a Beginner Student One of the challenges a beginner student will face is prioritizing. It may be possible in other languages, but not French. So... what kind of beginner French student are you? To study French the right way from the very start, I suggest you check-out my French downloadable audiobook À Moi Paris Method - Beginner. More French vocabulary? See this post for ideas how to use them. Drill On The Most Difficult French Sounds It takes practice to master the French R. Say your dog has a beloved red ball. Speaking/Understanding Challenged Beginner & Intermediate You really understand basic French grammar, know your verb conjugations etc... You even ace your French A1 and A2 written exams! French Beginners Should Focus On The Present Tense The Present Indicative tense is the tense you'll use in most of your French interactions. The French are known to be sticklers on etiquette and you do not want to start off on the wrong foot. I've seen many people spend hours on drilling French verb tenses they didn't even understand! Or take real pleasure at doing "find and replace the direct object" kind of exercises. Along with teaching your French, it should teach you how to simplify your sentence, and use "simple" French. It's commonly used to describe learners' language skills, and the program you need to cover to pass exams. Of course, you need audio to learn how to pronounce the French politeness expressions correctly. You cannot be fluent in French right away. What should you study after you studied politeness? Setting up a structured approach, which clearly takes you from point A to point B is essential if you want to build up a solid foundation. On top of all the French liaisons, elisions etc which obey the pronunciation rules, the French also apply lots of "glidings" when they speak. Now it is easier than ever to adapt and rebrand them for your own use. "French Beginner": this simple expression is used to describe people with quite different needs. Watch out for the free resources There is a lot of free resources out there: they are fun, but a huge part of a successful learning process is time management. The following paragraphs will give precise tips for different kind of French beginners. I suggest you take a look at my 1100+ phrases and essential dialogs all recorded at 2 different speeds and levels of enunciation by a Parisian native. C'est possible ? C'est très beau là ! (A table by the window. So this is not a perfect match with the CEFR. Caveats: These Word files have been automatically generated by exporting from Adobe Acrobat Pro DC. However, if you are not learning French to pass exams, communicating simple orders, being polite, talking about yourself, your family, your hobbies - and doing it with a decent accent - should be more important than spending hours drilling over your French verb tenses... Which bring me to my next point. However, as a beginner, you need to stay focused on your priorities. However, don't expect to be able to handle a real conversation without a minimum of sentence structure. Learn Vocabulary YOU Are Likely To Use One of the first sentences I learned in English class was "the cat climbed onto the roof". Remember, as a French beginner, you should: set realistic goals for yourself, find a structured audio method which doesn't assume you are a grammar genius and explains everything clearly, get plenty of audio practice: repeat, repeat, repeat, and keep your priorities straight. You'll enjoy learning French in the context and then test yourself with the Q&A section. How much is-it? Je voudrais un café américain s'il vous plaît I'd like an [American-style] long coffee. Je suis désolé, je ne parle pas très bien français - I'm sorry, I don't speak French much. Je comprends un peu si on parle lentement I understand a bit when people speak slowly. My first tip is to always keep in mind these goals. French politeness is a great way to start learning French pronunciation, and when explained properly, should also cover fundamental French grammar such as "tu" versus "vous, some verb conjugations and introduce the notion of adjective agreement. See this post for examples of people who have already rebranded/adapted some of the books. It's written with the true French beginner in mind. It's because there is a strong liaison after the subject pronouns "on, nous, vous, ils, elles" but usually no liaison after a noun (such as "les enfants". In short, if they are useful to you, please feel free to use them. Each chapter of the story of my beginner level French audiobooks are recorded in 3 different ways: A slow version: very enunciated French which you can easily repeat to help you conquer traditional French pronunciation A normal version with French glidings and elisions (you'll learn about these in the method) A modern street version as natives would actually speak so that you are ready to understand them Voilà. Verb conjugations? You'll have to be patient, and work your way step by step to reach fluency. However, as a beginner, you should be happy if you could say: "une table à côté de la fenêtre. It's like opening a Russian doll: there are so many layers of things to understand and memorize before you can truly use them. There are even more "street" glidings in French than there is in English. A French list of sentences will give you the pleasure of saying a couple of things in French and will show the French people your good will. To Prepare For A Trip To France, Learn Sentences In Context If you are just learning French to prepare for a trip to France, you may not need to get involved in deep French studying. My 23+ French teaching experience shows that to learn French efficiently, students need to learn with a structured audio method which addresses four needs: introduce truly useful vocabulary such as greetings and politeness, asking questions, ordering food, talking about yourself, your family, your hobbies... implement both traditional and modern French pronunciations, set the foundations of French grammar in a clear and logical, step-by-step way: like building blocks, give you plenty of examples so you can also learn French in context. The books are written using British English, so some words will be marked as incorrectly spelt in the Word versions if you are using a different English, e.g. "colour" is incorrect in US English, as Word prefers "color". How come? You can even produce your own versions and sell them in bookstores or online for profit, with no royalties or fees to pay to us. And it's quite different from the enunciated traditional French pronunciation (like a TV news host would use) - and it's also likely to be different from what you have learned in school. Of course, learning the French tenses of the past is important, and they would be part of an A2 level exam. The French method you use should understand that need and use re-usable examples to illustrate the points of grammar... Nothing too fancy, nor poem quotes, but daily things, truly useful examples you could actually re-use in a French interaction. Now, let's address a particular but common French problem for the beginner - or even intermediate (hopefully not advanced) students: the French accent and understanding of Spoken French. And you may even learn a thing or two.
